| 1. Different Attitudes | 4. Growth in part-time working |
| 2. Types of Student's work | 5. Students life is more difficult now |
| 3. Difficulties in studying | 6. Unqualified work |

- A. According to one survey, four out of ten students attending universities in the UK had a job during term-time. With more tuition fees and other additional costs, it seems reasonable to assume that this figure is increasing. The students we talked to confirmed that this is the case.
- B. For many of the students we interviewed, the idea of a part-time job on the top of their fulltime studies is no longer an option, but a necessity. At the same time, some of them said that their universities offer little help regarding employment or simply advise students against having a job. They expect students to be working on their degrees and nothing else.
- C. Most students are employed in part-time or temporary jobs and, as a result of this, don't have jobs security and don't qualify for sick leave or holiday pay. Most students are hired in place of regular workers, but are generally paid less than them. Some students don't actually work for pay, but do jobs in exchange for lower rent and/or meals.
- D. With the exception of those able to find jobs inside universities, the majority of students have jobs at night or during the weekend. One student reported that, apart from working, her weekends were spent sleeping because she was generally too tired to do anything else. Another student said that she works 22 hours a week in addition to her 20 weekly hours of lectures: "I wouldn't say it has had any effect academically, but it means I can't go out much."
- E. More than 10 per cent of students had missed lectures or failed to submit work because of job commitments. It seems almost inevitable that, due to financial pressures, the university experience will change. Increased costs in education together with pressures to succeed in a competitive world are defining the circumstances in which today's students struggle to complete their degrees. Student life really does involve a lot more work these days.

Задание 2	Прочитайте текст и заполните пропуски А-Ф частями предложений, обозначенных цифрами 1-7. Одна из частей в списке 1-7 лишняя. Перенесите свои ответы в БЛАНК ОТВЕТОВ.
